(Times and Sunday Times Good University Guide, 2021)

“I chose to study at Royal Holloway in 2008 because: I met the entry requirements; its campus structure provided a balance between academic and social life; its geographical location in Surrey and proximity to London were important as well; and finally the positive feedback from my peers who had been already enjoying their experience there.

Both courses were challenging and intensive, so the biggest enjoyment came from the feeling that you were actually understanding the subject. I was really supported by my peers and academic staff.

After graduating my masters, I was offered a job in the defence sector. I then joined a private company as a sales Executive. It was a fantastic journey where I was promoted to General Manager, managing a team, a car showroom, and I worked closely with the government sector across Europe, and spent a lot of time travelling. Recently I was offered a job in the IT industry.”
